The EUSDR – Common Approach, Shared Competences

Challenges for Policies, Economics, Science, Culture and Education in the Danube Region

European as well as international developments reveal numerous challenges for the EU Strategy for the Danube Region (EUSDR) and the EU itself. Therefore the conference poses the question which institutions can be used at local, regional, national and global levels to implement the EUSDR's objectives.

What prerequisites are necessary to strengthen the European idea in the Danube Region and, to a large extent, throughout Europe, against growing right-wing populisms, extremists and radicalization processes?

Which measures, initiatives, and networks are needed within politics, economics, science, culture and education in order to not only thwart the frequently mentioned 'polycrisis', but also to create new perspectives for the Danube Region to show good practice for a common Europe?
